ROCKBRIDGE ALUM SPRINGS, VA.

"Get out your smiles and laughter, In storage put your woes; A restful time go after, Where cool the zephyr blows. Go where the spring bubbles, And where the mountains pile; Go and forget your troubles, By loating for a while." No place could afford a better opportunity to the health or pleasure seeking loafer than the Rockbridge Alum in this beautiful June season. Most people miss the prettlest time of the year by staying in town all of June preparing to go away for July and August, and invariably a warm wave comes, which is sickening in a degree, and brings with it flies and mosquitoes, whose presence make life a burden. Here we are free from such pests.

is a stranger here. This is the time to know each other and to form the most lasting friendships.

HOTEL OPEN.

Since June 1st the hotel has been open, and a number of delightful people have come and settled themselves for the whole summer, and while the pleasures now are of a quiet order, there is much to do to while away the days before the advent of the band, and with it a whirl of gayety from early morn until the wes sma' hours. This is the season for golf, long rambles through the woods, and reading. Those who are here in parties return each day about noon from a tramp over the mountains with great bunches of wild flowers, and others are to be seen in nocks and corners enjoying a quiet reading all to themselves.

Sileippy HOLLOW.

Some author has said, "Blessed is the man who invented sleep." Well, thrice blessed is this place then, for one can sleep day and night here without a sedative. For one afflicted with insomnit this is a perfect haven of rest, as there is something about the atmosphere that will lull the most nervous into quiet and repose.

Hayes, of the United States army, General Hayes is a retired brigadier-general, and before being made general was colonel of the Thirteenth Cavalry and had temporary command of the department of Dakota, with headquarters at St. Paul.

Prior to that he was in the Philippines and Cuba, and commanded the cavalry of General Fitzhugh Lee's corps (Seventh). The General is here in advance of his family, who are now in Atlanta and will join him early in July for the summer. No one here adds as much to the pleasure of the guests as the courtly, genila General, who we are glad to know is to be with us the entre season.

THE ANTE-BELLUM WHITE.

The ante-bellum White Sulphur seasons witnessed a social phase, the record of which is unlike anything which has come after it; the passing of which must ever be deplored. Upon the scroll which remains to perpetuate a memory are written many names of famous men and equally famous women, who did not disdain to add to their reputation the additional lustre of a fame by popularity or belieship in a hostelry circle known as distintice throughout the length and breadth of the United States.
All southern cities and States and many

When southern society first rehabilita-ted itself, after years of civil strife, and turned its face once more toward the Virginia mountains, the ensuing season-at the White Sulphur was one against which a red letter stands, because of the fact that General Robert E. Lee and his daughters were among the guests and daughters were among the guests and around them interest and admiration cen-around them interest and admiration centered.

Later days ushered in the reign of such transcendantly beautiful women as Miss Lizzie Cabell, now Mrs. Albert Ritchie, of Baltimore; Miss Mary Triplett, afterward Mrs. Philip Haxall, of this city; Miss Mattle Ould, who married Mr. Oliver Schoolcraft, and a host of others almost equally as famous.

The era of the celebrated trio has been succeeded by many others as the years have passed and later flowers and buds of southern womanhood have successively become magnates of attraction at the White.

SEASON OF 1891.

Become magnates of attraction at the White.

SEASON OF 1891.

The session of '91 is famed as one of the most brilliant of a past decade. Miss Alice Castleman, a belle of the Bine Grass region of Kentucky, then and there swayed hearts as a woman from "God's country" would naturally be expected to do; Mrs. Andrew Simonds, of Charleston, S. C., and Mrs. Walter Scott, of Anniston, Ala., were typical Southern women and acknowledged society leaders; Richmond's galaxy shone brilliantly in the personality of Mrs. John Skelton Williams, Miss Helen Christian, Miss Bell Perkins, Miss Agnes Drewry, Miss Nora Leary and Mrs. Eppa Hunton, who was a bride of that year. The meeting of the Virginia Bar Association in August of that year at the White gave an added fillp to all gayeties and put a spice and favor into all social intercourse.

As the White, with its unequalled scenery, its romantic walks and drives, its beautiful grounds, its cottages and its central hestelry must ever be identified not more with the new than the "old South," so the Virginia Hot Springs, with its Homestead Hotel, its casino, its golf grounds and its beautiful summer homes, must testify to the great power of progress in the march of transformation and improvement.

South Gloucester at the home or Mr. W.
B. Rowe. The occasion was the expression of the good will and joy of the whole community upon the return of Dr.
E. C. S. Tallaferro, who, after year's study in Vienna, has come back to the scene of his first work in the field obspractice.

Dr. Tallaferro's many friends signified his return by presenting him with a beautiful quilt and sofa cushion which had been made in many colored squares of embeodery. Upon each square was embroidered the name or initials of the maker, and the whole effect was both beautiful and unique.

The presentation was made by the Rev.

by the seashore or on the lake with the setting of pine woods, where the walks and talks are beyond the sound of the splashing waves and only the laughing of pines can be heard, there are always couples or groups to be found in earnest conversation or merry laughter.

The sociability of the cottage porch life is evidenced by the many groups gathered in the big rocking chairs each morning, who are busy on their fanny work, some doing exquisite lace or embroidery, while others are dealing with the perplexing question of stocks, so important to a woman's mind for this summer. Other groups are noticed gathered around the card tables, where bridge flanch, euchre and other games are enjoyed until lunch time.

The ball room at the hotel has been ver; say during the past week, for the cool wenings were not conductive to the stroks or tet-atets outside, but with the first strains from the orchestra brought many dancers in, who greatly enlivened the evenings for those who love to watch them. Saturdays and Sundays large numbers of young men come down from the cities, and these are the festive evenings for the girls, who so anxiously await the arrivals of the cars.

ELECTRIC LINE.

The Chesapeake Transit Company have such fine cars on their electric line and are so convenient to hotel and cottages that many impromptu parties are given to Cape Henry or Lynnhaven Inlet, where a climb up the wonderful sand fills or a row in the boats around the inlet is indulged in a for an afternoon until the seaside appetites drive all home for the hot fish suppers.

At Miss Lilly Pollock's cottage there were a good many arrivals during the week, among them being Mrs. John Jackson, of Richmond; Mrs. William Bernard, Preston and Miss Carline B. Preston, of
